

Why you need to hire an attorney for an initial Social Security application

Put Our Experience on Your Side

Applying for Social Security disability benefits is not a do-it-yourself project. The process is time consuming and extremely complex. A minor mistake in the paperwork can cause your claim to be denied. Social Security allows you to apply either online; on the phone or in person at one of their offices --- however, as good as their staff is our case consultants are trained to look for the conditions which will cause you to be ruled disabled. Our case consultants are trained to help you fully develop the medical evidence of record to support your claim so that you win your case!

The attorneys and staff at Linder Law office understand how to prepare a Social Security disability claim in a manner that positions you for success at the initial application stage. Our goal is to help disabled people obtain all the benefits they are eligible to receive as quickly as possible.

Our firm has a significant approval rate at the initial application stage.

A mishandled initial application can delay the benefits you deserve. If you miss a deadline or don't fill out the paperwork correctly, your claim can be denied and you could lose important and significant financial back benefits. In the meantime, you are left unable to work and support yourself and, often, without insurance coverage.

Because we have worked with thousands of disabled people, we know that they often minimize the severity and impact of their conditions. We never inflate the seriousness of a client's disability. We present the facts in a manner that tells the full, true story. We are also successful in helping "frame" your story in functional restriction terms such so that Social Security can evaluate your claim in your favor. We will describe your disability in terms that are meaningful to the Social Security Administration, focusing on factual information about how your condition or conditions limit your ability to perform the tasks necessary to work.

Our Staff

Linder Law Office has an experienced staff which works one on one with clients – developing your social security disability case involves a lot of work making sure your medical records are complete and getting additional supporting documents to your physicians to support your claim of physical, mental or emotional functional limitations. At Linder Law Office we employ a paralegal of over six years experience who has completed the National Association of Legal Assistants advanced paralegal course; a former Disability Adjudicator who worked at the Illinois Bureau of Disability Determination Services for over thirty years before retiring and a Nurse Consultant. Together with Kevin Linder’s legal experience representing claimants before Administrative Law Judges and work at the Social Security Appeals Council and Federal court level, Linder Law Office offers superior representation and a caring attitude towards our clients which is reassuring in one of the most difficult times in a client’s life.

Gathering the Information Needed for Success

Our lawyers and staff are able to review your medical records and work with your doctors to help them describe the limitations you experience because of your disabling health problems. We have a nurse consultant on staff to help us fully utilize the most pertinent information from clients' medical records. Individuals who prepare their disability claims themselves generally do not have access to this important information or the legal or medical knowledge required to use to their advantage. To arrange a free initial consultation about your SSDI claim, please contact us by email at _____ or call _____. Our Social Security disability law firm represents disabled people in throughout Illinois.